

Superbude Digital House Rules

Wi-Fi, drones, smartphones: almost everything that can be invented has been invented by now. And nowadays, almost every device has a built-in camera and microphone.

So that you

- can always be sure that your privacy is protected during your stay at a Superbude hotel, and that
- are always aware for what purposes you may (or may not) use a Superbude Internet connection, we've established some rules to make life easier for us and all our guests, which we call "digital house rules".

1. General

When using electronic devices, especially cameras, smartphones and other appliances that allow you to take photos or shoot videos, you must show consideration for other visitors and also observe the Superbude house rules. This means: if another guest is disturbed by you taking photos or filming, you must refrain from doing so. If a member of the Superbude staff asks you to refrain from taking photos or filming in specific situations inside Superbude or on Superbude premises, you are obliged to do so.

2. Use of smartphones and cameras in certain areas of Superbude

In areas accessible to all guests within Superbude – reception, bar/restaurant, toilets – taking photos or filming (and publishing them) is fundamentally prohibited, unless Superbude expressly permits this. The operation of drones is strictly forbidden throughout and above any Superbude premises.

3. Use of the Superbude Internet connection

We're all familiar with the saying that "the Internet isn't an unregulated area". But it's true that the infringement of third-party rights – such rights under copyright law or privacy rights or the right to one's own image, for example – is just as prohibited on the Internet as it is "offline".

In particular, offering copyright-protected material via so-called file-sharing networks is illegal and will result in legal action being taken by the respective copyright holders. It is therefore prohibited to connect devices with this type of software installed to the Superbude Wi-Fi network. As a guest, you hereby guarantee that neither you nor your travelling companions will use the Internet connection made available to you during your stay for illegal purposes. You fully exempt Superbude from any damage or expenses incurred by Superbude due to the misuse of the Internet during your stay.

We wish you a pleasant stay!
